

News Brief

Contact: Sandra Moran
(703) 709-3000 x137

2002 PSP AWARDS RECOGNIZE EXCELLENCE AND INNOVATION IN SCHOLARLY AND REFERENCE PUBLISHING

HERNDON, VIRGINIA, February 14, 2003 – Apex ePublishing wishes to congratulate the recipients of the 2002 American Publisher's Professional/Scholarly Publishing (PSP) Division awards for outstanding journal and electronic products.

Notable among the categories recognized are the Best Internet-Based Product awards. In the Social Sciences / Humanities division, the winner was the CQ Supreme Court Collection, by CQ Press, published by the Congressional Quarterly Press. In the Mathematics / Science division, the award was presented to the ACS Journal Archive by ACS Publications, published by the American Chemical Society.

Joel Poznansky, President of Apex ePublishing, said, "Both recipients are to be congratulated for their achievement. The American Publisher's PSP Division awards are dedicated to recognizing excellence and innovation in scholarly and reference publishing. These electronic products provide a valuable, readily accessible tool to academics, researchers, and other users worldwide. The award acknowledges the high quality and integrity of each product, which are testament to the thoughtful planning and craft that went into constructing them. It is always inspiring to be involved with something which is quite first rate."

Additional information and a complete list of recipients can be found at www.pspcentral.org.

###

About Apex ePublishing

Apex ePublishing, a subsidiary of Apex Data Services, Inc., is the world's premier provider in the conversion of electronic and paper text into structured, electronic data for academic institutions, and the e-publishing market. Not only have we set the world standard for accuracy for over a decade, but we have also developed the industry's most sophisticated production management and control system. Established in 1988, Apex ePublishing is a rapidly growing, debt-free, and employee owned company. Find us on the Internet at <http://www.apexinc.com>.